Celebrating 65 Years of Care and Community

Celebrating 65 Years of Service

The University Eye Center (UEC) is one of the largest optometric outpatient facilities in the nation, offering both primary and specialized vision care services. Each year the UEC sees more than 70,000 patients of all ages from every borough and reaches 250,000 patient encounters when including our satellite clinics and education affiliates.

Did you know?

Built in 1912, the current home of the University Eye Center was originally the home of the famed Aeolian Hall which hosted many popular musical performances of the early 1900s, including George Gershwin's legendary debut of "Rhapsody in Blue" on February 12, 1924.

Community Clinic to Vision Center

The University Eye Center began as a community eye care clinic in 1956 with the founding of the Optometric Center of New York (OCNY), a nonprofit resource for patients and professionals. The original clinic was located on East 25th street in New York City, where it later became part of SUNY College of Optometry. Today the OCNY is the affiliated foundation of the College, raising charitable support that advances optometric education and research as well as provides financial assistance for patients.

Eyes on 50+

SUNY College of Optometry was established on April 14, 1971, adopting the University Optometric Center and building on the legacy of the Optometric Center of New York. In 2000, both the College and clinic moved from downtown Manhattan to their current 18-story, historic home at 33 West 42nd Street. The University Optometric Center was renamed the University Eye Center in 2009.
